

TEASER

Miguel Godfrey Saunders is a man of vision in his ripe old age of 64 years. He stands looking out of the 5th floor window of his office thinking of what it took to get where he's at right now. He was born to a single mother on the island of the Grand Caymans. His father who was a successful businessman, never married his mother. When Miguel asked him about that his father told him that he was too promiscuous to marry even though he loved her, he didn't want to hurt her. Miguel's father promised her he would take care of her and their son. While talking with his father, he found out he had a half brother one year older. His father encouraged he and his brother to work hard and study harder to achieve their goals in life. Miguel took this to heart and did exactly what his father had preached to him and his brother all their young lives. Miguel strived to be the best and finished high school second in his class. Miguel was accepted to the University of Middle Texas, where Miguel studied Geology and minored in electrical engineering.

Miguel knew if he couldn't get a job as a geologist, he could fall back on his engineering background as well. He always had a fascination about rocks and how the earth was formed. He also liked to take things apart to see how they worked. So upon graduation Miguel enrolled in the master program of the university in electrical engineering. It took him two years to finish. From there Miguel enrolled at University of Eastern Texas for his Doctorate, making great strides in his academic achievements. That's where he would find his true love. Sunova Lola Talbot, a Dominican born beauty that caught his eye the first day of class. Sunova was studying mechanical engineering and they hit it off from the start. After courting her for a full year the couple were married in a nice ceremony paid for by both fathers. While in school, Miguel and Sunova welcomed their baby boy Miguel Jr. Miguel continued his studies and received his Doctorate degree. Miguel took a job in New Mexico thinking it would be the best place for him to get his feet wet in the industry and support his family. Miguel worked hard and his added value to the company was recognized. After ten years on the job, Miguel became VP of Research and Development. Hearing that the company was up for sale, Miguel went to his brother, Samuel Saunders who's now the CEO of a large Caribbean bank to discuss the possibility of the two of them purchasing the company. His brother agrees and 37 years later this is where we are today.
