Sesame Workshop, the nonprofit educational organization behind Sesame Street, partnered with the IRC to launch a new Arabic-language TV program for children in Jordan, Lebanon, Iraq and Syria coping with conflict and displacement.

Called 'Ahlan Simsim', which means “Welcome Sesame” in Arabic, the show features familiar friends Elmo, Cookie Monster and Grover, as well as new Muppets with stories and experiences refugee children can relate to: Jad, who had to leave his home; Basma, who befriends the newcomer; and Ma'zooza, a baby goat who follows Jad and Basma everywhere.

The first 'Ahlan Simsim' season will focus on understanding and managing emotions that refugee children experience, such as anger, fear, frustration and loneliness. These coping skills form a crucial developmental foundation for all young children, but especially those who have experienced the trauma of war and displacement.

- Director, writer & editor for the drama-documentary film (Ali's Return), Produced by Malas Media Production – Amman - Jordan.

An unusual group of people who came together in the most unlikely location to make it possible for the greatest athlete on the planet to have a career once again.

This film has not been shown yet, as I'm waiting for support from the royal film commission in Jordan to finish implementing it in the best way.
