Finding high-school physics exceedingly difficult, Jason Krawczyk decided to pursue his passion for filmmaking. After shooting numerous music videos, commercials, and shorts, Jason directed his first feature-length project, "The Briefcase." In 2015 Jason wrote and directed the Henry Rollins horror-comedy "He Never Died," which premiered at South By Southwest and is currently streaming on Netflix. The sequel, She Never Died, was released in 2020 on Amazon Prime with his new project "Sunset Superman," starring Michael Jai White, premiering at SXSW in 2023.

Along with directing, Jason Krawczyk has written, punched up, and ghostwritten several screenplays, novels, and novellas, with his first publication, "An Earth That Knows Magic," released in 2022 by Black Hare Press. His upcoming books "It Looks Like Dad" and "Reality Squall" are scheduled for release in 2023 and 2024. His passion for writing led him to co-own "Little Ghosts Books" with his spouse, Chris Krawczyk, an inclusive cafe and bookstore that offers readers horror books from sterling classics, LGBTQ authors, and burgeoning indie publishers.

Jason's primary goals are honing his writing, directing, and storytelling craft while collaborating with the talented people he has met along the way.
